Prizes for the best old time costumes on Friday were won by Earl Burns as George Washington, and Miss Bernice Meech as a flapper and Spike's waitresses Ann Smith, Evelyn Weiss and Mary Smiley as can-can girls. The prize for the oldest car in the parade went to Kenneth Rohde who drove a 1924 model T Ford. Bob Dittmer of Houghton Lake came up in a 1922 Dord but did not arrive in time for the parade.

DEPTH OF INFLUENCE OF MICHIGAN SUPREME COURT OVER CITIZENS AGAIN DEMONSTRATED

THE DEPTH OF ITS INFLUENCE over the state's eight million citizens and their elected officials was again demonstrated by the Michigan Supreme Court.

In a period of just a few days in June the high court settled legal problems stemming from family squabbles to such widely debated state issues as taxes and labor disputes.

The court also adopted two rules of procedure that in effect remind the governor, the legislature and other judges to keep on their toes.

One rule paves the way for a quick decision on the legality of whatever tax program Gov. G. Mennen Williams and the GOP-controlled legislature agree upon. The rule allows Williams to bypass lower courts for decisions on matters "of such public moment as to require early determination."

Democrats have questioned the constitutionality of the Republican plan for a penny boost in the use (sales) tax, just as Republicans questioned the constitutionality of the Democratic-endorsed "piggy back" income tax was defeated in the House.

Another new rule sets up a procedure for cracking down on any judge who brings "disrepute" to the bench. It was another of many steps the high court has taken to tighten its control over conduct of the lower courts.

The court had a 5-3 split, with the Democratic majority controlling, on adoption of both rules.

And the court had a 5-3 split on a decision that said a taxpayer has the right to get his money back when an assessor makes a mistake.

In a majority opinion that will be a guideline for future tax disputes at the local level, Justice Eugene Black, of Port Huron, said the high tribunal upholds "the right of taxpayers to equitable relief from the unconscionable effect of gross mistakes of public officials in the field of taxation; mistakes gross enough to constitute fraud."

Black wrote another prevailing opinion he said was of "apparent statewide moment."

The opinion said the various modes of fund allocation that by constitution and statute are based on population must refer to "the most recent statewide federal

The first program of the series was a "Salute to Reed City, Michigan" which was widely accepted and praised by the people of Reed City and surrounding areas. It was said, "The Salute to Reed City was a fascinating and informative exploration of the people, places and industries of Reed City."

County Chamber Manager Attends National Institute

Robert Hayes, secretary-manager of the Crawford County Chamber of Commerce, participated in the 36th annual National Institute for Organization Management at Michigan State University June 21-27.

More than 400 local chamber of commerce managers and trade association executives from 27 states and Canada are studying to increase professional competency and provide better service to their respective organizations and to their communities.

The organization men and women were reminded at an early session that "education comes mainly from tough experience and rarely through sudden flashes of inspiration," said Samuel B. Shapiro, secretary of the Linen Supply Association of America, Chicago, Ill.

"Experience here at the Institute means not merely listening to your able faculty, but comparing what they say with what you have observed and done," he added.

Mr. Shapiro pointed out to the men and women the Institute was one step in the total continuing education process which is a life-long activity.

"Most of all," he said, "I hope that, if you are not already on fire for organization management, this Institute will breathe on the sparks already in you and kindle an enduring flame of love for your career in organizational management."

freedom, the exercise of free speech.

In another labor matter, the state's highest court was told it would have the last word on Michigan's controversial "Ford Case." The U. S. Supreme Court rejected an appeal by Ford Motor Co. of the state court's ruling giving jobless pay to Michigan Ford workers idled by a strike of Ford workers in Canton, Ohio.

Lawbreakers got a break in two of the court's latest decisions. The justices said police stopping an auto to issue a traffic ticket may not also routinely search the exercise of a basic constitutional Heavy on "Go" but light on dough. What Sunoco Custom-Blending does is to fit your car with the exact octane it needs for lively stepping power—without making you pay for octane your car can't use. You can save up to 4¢ a gallon on premiums!

And, Custom-Blending is so easy! Just start with the blend recommended for your car by your Sunoco dealer. Next tankful, drop down to the next lower blend at the next lower price, and so on, until you find the blend that performs the best, yet costs the least!

Only because there are 6 high octane Sunoco blends... 6 different octane strengths, you can be sure of getting an exact fit for your engine! And, each blend is the finest quality motor fuel your money can buy. So, no matter which blend your car needs, you get snappy acceleration, surging passing power, and freedom from harmful deposits and spark plug fouling!

Big power at "Regular" Price, too! Sunoco Custom Blend "200" means big new power for many "regular" users. It's proved higher octane than most "regular" buyers are getting anywhere else. It's higher quality... highest value!

Note buried tanks. From these, pump draws (A) premium quality Blue Sunoco "200", and (B) Sunoco Ozone Concentrate (specially refined motor fuel). These are precisely blended by the pump to the exact blend number ordered. Approved by various governmental authorities.

ONLY SUNOCO'S 6 CAN FIT ALL CARS!

Do Gain Time . . .

Once again, the anxious eyes of the world have been turned to a conference of the foreign ministers of the great powers. It has been a conference which was held with considerable gloom from the very beginning. Our Secretary of State, Christian Herter, made abundantly clear before he departed for Geneva that he expected comparatively little to result, and thus, in effect, warned the nation against a false optimism. The secretary's anticipations have certainly been borne out. The same time, the hope that some progress will be made, no matter how tortuously slow, remains.

In this connection, Reader's Digest, in its June issue, publishes a piece of unusual interest. It is taken from a book by Harry and Bonaro Overstreet called "What We Must Know About Communism," (W. W. Norton & Co., New York). The excerpt has to do with the Kremlin's view of what a conference is, and what it should accomplish.

The Overstreets write: "To the Communists, the delegates to a conference do not represent merely their nations. They represent one or the other party to the struggle—a struggle which cannot be negotiated. Communists do not expect peace or even a lowering of tensions to result from a conference. To them, tension is the normal state of politics, and a conference table—even when called a peace table—is simply one more place where war is carried on."

Chapter and verse, from the highest Marxian authorities, are cited in support of this. In 1920, Lenin said: "It would be a great mistake to believe that a peaceful agreement about concessions is a peaceful agreement with capitalists. It is an agreement concerning war." This means, as the Overstreets phrase it, that "Communists negotiate not to seek a common basis for accord but to learn what they can from the enemy and about the enemy; and in the light of this, to get what they can in concessions or favorable agreements." And that, in turn, explains the Kremlin's expert use of delaying tactics in all meetings with the Western World's leaders.

Now an obvious question arises: Why, under these conditions, should we and the other Western powers negotiate with the Soviets at all? The Overstreets have a three-faceted answer to that. First, negotiations have an educational function—that is, "only by finding out what specific limited problems they are willing to negotiate can we judge the merit of their offers." Second, the incredibly tedious efforts to negotiate with the Soviets have shown the free world that we really are at war, even though it's still of the cold variety, and thus serves to unite the Western nations in a common cause.

The third reason given by the Overstreets could certainly be infinitely the most important in the long and difficult run we are engaged in. Here's what they say: "Finally, every conference earns for the free world a further margin of time; and time is far kinder to freedom than to totalitarianism. Within the vastness of the Communist empire there are the millions of human beings who do not want to be there, who have never wanted to be there. The free world has not established outpost parties behind the Iron Curtain. Yet it has psychological outposts there: conquered peoples; minds that resist totalitarianism; minds that have been educated to a point where they begin to want stretching space. Time is not kind to 'monolithic unity'."

Time, in sum, may prove to be the most potent weapon the free world can possess.

Helping to choose a Cherry Queen should be a privilege and Mrs. C. G. Clippert was accorded that honor last week when she was selected one of the judges for Traverse City's annual event. Other judges were Miss Elizabeth Pfeiffer, Flint, and Kenneth Petrie, Cadillac.

In the presence of the families and a few intimate friends, Mrs. Edward E. Hartwick became the bride of Louis Edward Hart, of Chicago, Tuesday afternoon. The ceremony was performed in Mrs. Hartwick's home—on Fairway Drive, Detroit, at 3:30 o'clock. The bride is a graduate of Grayling schools. It was she who, by her generous gift to the state, made possible for the people the grand Hartwick Pines Park north of this city. She is a sister of Olaf Michelson.

Last Friday, a group of outsiders buzzed into town and caused a great deal of disturbance ed a great deal of disturbance around the rear entrance of the A. & P. store. Local merchants, especially the grocery business, were warned to guard themselves against the destructive vandals. Although one of these obnoxious was a queen, her court did not handle themselves very well, and caused a riot which attracted many passersby. The drone of wings could be heard in the air and some appeared to be mighty hard workers. The queen, a honey, finally led her followers to a distant position and thus a swarm of bees which had escaped from a hive flew into the air and disappeared.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Don't "Check" With Red!

Red Johnson, owner of the real hardware store, likes to keep business simple—"pay as you go," says Red.

Recently, to emphasize the point, Red had a sign painted on the store window. In big red letters it read: "Please—absolutely no checks accepted—pay in cash only."

When the sign painter had finished the sign, he delivered it to Red and named his price—"in dollars." Very reasonable," said Red. And the next thing you know he was handing the fellow a check for ten dollars! From where I sit, some rules we make boil down to "don't do as I do, do as I say." It reminds me of a friend who drank nothing but feed tea and criticized the fact that I preferred a glass of beer. That's not only annoying, it's intolerant. Good neighbors should make tolerance the rule with more "do" and less "say."

The photo above belonging to Frank DeWitt and the following article concerning Camp Higgins 672, Civilian Conservation Corps, was researched by Floyd Millikin of Grayling High's sophomore class for the Michigan Week page. Lacking room the article was not used at that time. Due to the fine job that Floyd accomplished, the article and photo are reproduced here.

The Civilian Conservation Corps moved from Camp Grayling in 1933 to the camp located in Beaver Creek, which was eight miles south of Grayling, off M-76. The first company commander was Captain Cortis (in command from 1933-1934). Next was Captain Murphy (1934 - 1940). The last was Captain J. Oster (1940-1942).

Activities of the men were: taking depth soundings on lakes; improving lakes and rivers; working at the fish hatchery, at the experimental station, and at the state nursery; building fire towers and bridges; taking water surveys; making fire trails and truck trails; working in blister rust; planting trees; taking fish surveys; and building the training school and the regional conservation office in Roscommon.

The men were paid one dollar a day, seven days a week. They were required to be away from camp eight hours a day, five days a week and six out of every eight hours had to be actual working time.

The men got up at six in the morning, made their beds, swept, had roll call, and then ate breakfast. Generally they had lunch in the woods and were back to camp for supper. Every night except on Friday and Saturdays they had to be in bed by ten o'clock. On those nights the truck town at midnight.

The Camp entered fifteen men and a few trucks for a convoy to 150 trucks that went to Little Rock, Arkansas when there was a big flood there. On March 4, 1934 the camp men saved all the other buildings on the Frank Love farm when the house burned.

Some of the local men in the camp were: State Superintendents—Bob Hagens, Merrell Jerrid and Andy Broadwood.

Other state men—Paul Schroeder, John Mallinger, George

Faith, Big Aid To Local Development

The Mackinac Bridge and industrial development in our town may not seem related, but they have a common denominator — faith.

The faith of the people of Michigan in our great state gave the builders of the Mackinac Bridge the strength to overcome obstacles before the bridge became a reality.

Today, the Mackinac Bridge—the world's greatest and costliest bridge—not only links the Upper and Lower Peninsulas but is symbol of the spirit, strength and unity of the people of Michigan.

Thus, qualities which made the Mackinac Bridge possible, exist in each Michigan community.

If used properly, they will help us overcome the obstacles which threaten our efforts to grow and prosper, providing a fourth important element is present.

That element is community attitude, sometimes called "climate," toward our present industry.

If we appreciate our present industry and let everybody know that it is appreciated, then our efforts to get new industry will, like the Mackinac Bridge, become a reality.

For many years, the Mackinac Bridge was nothing more than just a dream. Its completion and opening to traffic prove one thing — anything can be accomplished if we have faith, confidence and optimism.

The Mackinac Bridge would not have been built if Michigan had lacked faith.

Our desire to grow and prosper will be accomplished if our community attitude is at a high level at all times, and if we are united in our efforts to get new industry.

The vital role of community attitude in efforts to get new industry is the theme of an advertisement entitled "They Said It Could Be Done" which appears today in the Avalanche. It is another in a series of industrial development advertisements sponsored by the Michigan Press Association and the Michigan Economic Development Department which appear in this and 316 other Michigan newspapers as a public service.

THEY SAID IT COULDN'T BE DONE

They were dreamers... the men who talked of a bridge some day linking Michigan's Upper and Lower Peninsulas.

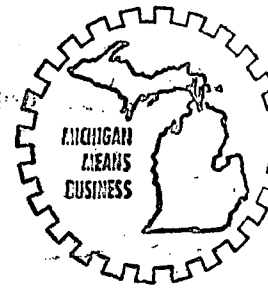

But after nearly 100 years of dreaming, the bridge that couldn't be built is a reality.

The Mackinac Bridge—one of the world's wonders—stands majestically today as a symbol of the spirit, strength and unity of the people of Michigan.

Let it too be a symbol of the vision, the strength and the united determination of our own community.

Let us work together—no letup, no factions—for the progress and prosperity of our community. . . . Some will say it can't be done.

Join hands with your local industrial development organization and the Michigan Economic Development Department to help our community grow and prosper.

This ad is one of a series published as a public service by this newspaper in cooperation with the Michigan Press Association and the Michigan Economic Development Department.
